Priests' Day on Wednesday to recall patron saint of clergy

By Benigno Ponce
Philippine Daily Inquirer

MANILA—Clergy, laity, and the people will join in the celebration of the 100th anniversary of the death of St. Peter of Verona, patron saint of the clergy, on Wednesday.

The celebration will be held at the Manila Cathedral, where a solemn Mass will be celebrated at 8 a.m. by the Archbishop of Manila, Cardinal Jaime Sin.

The Mass will be followed by a procession to the Shrine of St. Peter of Verona, where a novena will be held.

The celebration is part of the 100th anniversary of the death of St. Peter of Verona, who died on July 25, 1356.

St. Peter of Verona was a Dominican friar and a powerful preacher. He was known for his ability to convert sinners and for his defense of the faith.

He was canonized by Pope Sixtus IV in 1481.

Day of the documentary

THE DAY of the documentary has finally come. After decades and decades of playing second fiddle and country cousin to full-length feature films, some documentaries have started to get as much attention and/or generate as much income as mainstream cinema's "story" films.

Last year, it was "Howling for Columba," and this year it's "Valentin's 9/11," both winning awards, generating a be of buzz and controversy and landing it big at the box office to the tune of more than $90 million in only four weeks of release.

On the local film scene, some exceptional documentaries have also been made, notably by Clint Carolino ("Mariano Lugo: Sika Bata," "Rites"). But it has taken "Imelda" to make Filipino (or, more properly in the case of Imelda, "Fil-Am") documentaries break into the mainstream.

Ironically, I had to take the initially ignored notion of Imelda Marcos as the film about her to make it a shoulder-press production in many people's book.

In any case, "Imelda" has been drawing good business, particularly at mall cineplexes. So, we must take local theater owners and distributors will be more welcoming of other full-length documentaries that may come knocking at their doors.

Viewers who have been brought up exclusively on a diet of mainstream "story" movies may not appreciate the unique power that documentaries can hold over their hearts.

We consider ourselves lucky, however, that the film subjects we look enjoyed us in such varied ways in the documentary mode as "Butterfly Butterfly," "March of the North" and "Men of Arad."

There will other documentaries confirmed to that, while story films could be wonderfully effective and empathetic, well-made documentaries could be even more effective because they deal with life itself, unadorned, unembellished, and often full of visceral power, conviction and truth.

Now that documentaries have started moving into the mainstream, we think that theater audiences will appreciate their power and insight, which go beyond the past plot format, melodrama and self-conscious stellar performances that make many full-length story frames so predictable.

The day of the documentary has arrived. If its best examples play their cards well, this could rock and roll at the documentary's post.

Anak TV Seal

THE ANAKAL, daily champion TV programs and talents against each other in an atmosphere of camaraderie and friendly competition started last July 27. The Anak TV Seal contestants were held at the Negros Navigation Reception Hall, Pier 2, North Harbor, and started the entry of the several partners of the Anakal Anak Production for Children's Television, which sponsors the annual search for outstanding child-friendly TV shows.

A Memorandum of Understanding was signed by NANTV and its new partners, Negros Navigation, Un-Deviated and NDTV, as well as existing partners Columbia International Foods, Pampacan and Cebu Durable.

Anak TV Seal is the grandest of grand homecoming on Philippine TV last year. Thousands of stars from all walks of life all over the country these 45 winners, and a similar bumper crop of exceptional shows is expected to be "harvested" this year.

Cinema on 'I, Robot'

COVEMA, the Catholic Bishops Conference of the Philippines' initiative for enlightened film appreciation, has given "I, Robot" a "highly above average" assessment for technicals, and an "acceptable" ethical assessment.

Excerpt: "The biggest plus of this film is how the plot, dialogue and scenes are interwoven to come up with an emotionally compelling story and to bring life to inanimate objects like robots. There is no wasted moment, everything is revealed in every act, and each motivation is well-thought."

"This is complemented by the SFX, creation of a futuristic Chicago. 'Scanners' is a way to describe this film as it succeeds in actualizing the viewer's imagination."

On the other hand, Will Smith may be getting too typical portraying the flesh and orientates ill-disciplined cop of the future. But he delights the audience with his witty performance."

LA ALIHA, an NGO based in Spain, is promoting a benefit concert for the malnourished children of Zamboanga, Agutay, a fisherman's town from Spain, will perform at St. Scholastica's College on Aug. 3, and at San Agustin Church on Aug. 4. Call 400-0341 or 0917-8126877.

The project, in partnership with the City of Manila, will take funds to educate malnourished children through supplementary feeding and nutrition education. Parents of the children will also be provided livelihood opportunities.

ON THE WING. "Malawin" stars (from left) King, Gutierrez, Locsin, Torre and On the Wings

New tele-fantasy flies!

By Irma C. Perez

IT'S VIL see it all on television: family trees branching out in all directions, baby-swappping, bungled marriages, auto-driving, amnesia cases. And then there are the two fantasy series from the two giant networks featuring mermaids, complete with their under-the-sea world.

Now comes "Malawin," said to be the most expensive tele-fantasy from GMA 7, which the network says is aimed at reintroducing local soap-opera viewing with striking visual effects and grand production design.

The creative pool headed by director Dominic Zapata and Lore Reyes and head writer Don Michael Perez created the mythology of "Malawin." According to their story, Malawin beings committed to protect their tribe as well as humans from the fury of the Ravena, the subversive Malawin group seeking revenge against humans.

"During brainstorming, we knew we had to come up with a 'super soap,'" said head writer Perez. "We thought of stories from our childhood and 'Man from Atlantis' came up (the '70s TV show about a man who could breathe underwater). But GMA 7 already has 'Marteina,' so why not a character who could fly?"

Breakthrough

Teen star Richard Gutierrez plays the lead as Aguilon, a young Malawin who can fly and who risks life and wings to defend Alwina, played by Angel Locsin. Alwina, the daughter of Malawin Kapwa (Zoren Legaspi) and the mortal Serenita (Gina Manal), falls for Aguilon, who has been her protector since childhood.

Aguilon fights countless battles to save his ladylove and maintain from the Ravena.

SHOW TIME

Asked if there's more than a professional relationship between him and Locsin, Gutierrez said he's too busy to even think. "Angel is very pretty and nice but I think it would be unfair if I'd have a girl friend right now because I won't have time for her," he said in Filipino.

In the cast of "Malawin" are soap opera staples, new faces and celebrities on a quest for. Among the mythical winged characters are Gary Estrada as the wicked Ravena leader Rastema; Rasmick Sarmenta as Hahaga, Aguilon's brother who defects from the tribe; Bearish Melly as Kevak and Mariana Sanchez as Tika are sidekicks who mess up most of the time.

Richard's dad

In the human world, Dominic Wills plays Goldil, the late Malawin's boss who flies Aguilon. For Alwina, Amy Austria as Lomela who raises Alwina as her own child; and Karen de los Reyes as the social climber Inez.

Also in the cast are Lloyd Samson, Pia Pilapil, Eki Rodriguez, Bianca King and Apa Belicor.

Eddie Gutierrez plays the role of old Malawin in gumbak, and has no reservations about playing a supporting role to his real-life son, Richard. "I think he's a better actor than I was when I was his age," Wills said in Filipino.

Director Zapata, of the '70s "Dalis" fame, said they had in line something new for the audience. "Like the character of Don Miguel in 'Mister Garden,'" he pointed out, "He's mean and that's not accepted in our culture. We have to come up with an original that will capture the audience."

Creating a new mythology, a re-creating break from Tagalog soap, is no simple feat for the creative group. They must write a week's worth of script, 22 hours a day, carefully calculating shots, especially those where the actors are required to fly.

Cooperative actors

Heavy, elaborate costumes are up a large part of the production budget. Gutierrez's wings alone reportedly cost thousands of pesos.

"The costumes, the whole production, come delays," said Reyes. This is because the staff wouldn't compromise creativity for comfort, he said.

The actors have limited movement but they can't show discomfort during takes. The two directors said they have very cooperative actors.

"The whole crew takes a lot of time to get in, especially the camera lenses," Estrada said of his costume.

Some may notice political and environmental undertones in the soap, but when the drama details are stripped off, what's left is the love story of Aguilon and Alwina. "We don't want to be too epic-ish," said Zapata. "We want to keep it novelistic."

"Malawin" also starting tonight.

Nations agree to slash farm subsidies

WASHINGTON—More than 100 nations agreed to slash farm subsidies to help farmers in developing countries, but the deal is far from perfect.

The deal, known as the Doha Development Agenda, was agreed to by 148 nations at the World Trade Organization (WTO) meeting in Doha, Qatar, last November. It is the first time that all major trading nations have agreed to slash farm subsidies.

The deal is a landmark agreement because it is the first time that all major trading nations have agreed to slash farm subsidies. It is also the first time that all major trading nations have agreed to slash farm subsidies.

Farmers fear mine wastes will kill 500 hectares of riceland in Negros

By Tanya R. Jaramilla

Manila (AP) — Farmers in the Philippines' Negros island are warning that toxic waste from a new mine could destroy 500 hectares of rice fields.

The waste, which is a byproduct of a new mine, is being dumped in a river that flows into the rice fields. The waste is said to be highly toxic and could kill the rice plants.

The farmers are demanding that the government stop the dumping of the waste and take steps to protect the rice fields. They are also demanding compensation for the damage to the fields.

The government has said that it is taking steps to protect the rice fields and that it is working to find a way to dispose of the waste safely.

The farmers are still demanding that the government stop the dumping of the waste and take steps to protect the rice fields.

Sorsogon farmers turn to cleaning

Manila (AP) — Farmers in Sorsogon, Philippines, are turning to cleaning up the area around a new mine. The farmers are worried that the mine will pollute the area and destroy the rice fields.

The farmers are demanding that the government stop the mining and take steps to clean up the area. They are also demanding compensation for the damage to the rice fields.

Party-list system still vague to voters

MANILA, Aug. 1 (AP) — The party-list system, which was supposed to give voters a direct say in the election of representatives, remains a mystery to many Filipinos, according to a survey by the Commission on Elections (Comelec).

The survey, conducted last month, found that only 10 percent of voters knew how to vote for a party-list representative. The majority of voters, 90 percent, said they did not know how to vote for a party-list representative.

The survey also found that only 10 percent of voters knew that the party-list system was a part of the 1987 Constitution. The majority of voters, 90 percent, said they did not know that the party-list system was a part of the 1987 Constitution.

Paths to . . .

By [Name], [Title]

In business, it's often said that there are no shortcuts. But what if there were? What if you could skip the long, hard work of building a business from scratch and instead focus on the most profitable parts of the business? This is the idea behind the "Paths to . . ." series, which explores the most effective ways to build a successful business.

The first path is the "Direct Path," which involves focusing on the most profitable products or services and selling them directly to customers. This path is often the most straightforward, but it can also be the most competitive. To succeed on this path, you need to have a strong understanding of your market and your customers, and you need to be able to differentiate your offerings from those of your competitors.

The second path is the "Indirect Path," which involves building a business around a specific skill or expertise. This path is often the most profitable, but it can also be the most challenging. To succeed on this path, you need to have a strong understanding of your market and your customers, and you need to be able to differentiate your offerings from those of your competitors.

The third path is the "Hybrid Path," which involves combining elements of both the Direct and Indirect Paths. This path is often the most flexible, but it can also be the most complex. To succeed on this path, you need to have a strong understanding of your market and your customers, and you need to be able to differentiate your offerings from those of your competitors.

The fourth path is the "Innovative Path," which involves creating a new business model or a new product. This path is often the most profitable, but it can also be the most challenging. To succeed on this path, you need to have a strong understanding of your market and your customers, and you need to be able to differentiate your offerings from those of your competitors.

RESEARCHERS have found that the 100,000+ people who have been diagnosed with the disease are at a higher risk of death than those who have not. The researchers found that the risk of death was 1.5 times higher for those who had been diagnosed with the disease than for those who had not. The researchers also found that the risk of death was 1.5 times higher for those who had been diagnosed with the disease than for those who had not.

It is a very good idea to have a good understanding of the law and the courts. This is a very important part of the legal system. The law is a set of rules that govern the behavior of people. The courts are the institutions that interpret the law and resolve disputes. It is important to understand the law and the courts in order to be able to navigate the legal system effectively.
